Among the Farmers

"SPEED THE PLOW."

Very Sad.

O, the ache of weary feet
As they tramp the city's street
To their toil.
Few are happy, many sad,
Wan of face and poorly clad
In life's coil.

Some are sick and few are well,
Full of griefs they do not tell;
All are slaves.
Children play 'mid brick and stone;
(Flowers and grass for rich alone,
And for graves.)

Ah, that we might live in valleys fair
Where flowers gay perfume the air
And birds sing.
While we walk on earth's soft dirt,
Cushioned sod that will not hurt,
Nor corns bring.

An Old Basket Maker.

Basket making is one of the oldest crafts in this part of the country. The Indians made baskets before white men came and then they took up. Basketry was practiced in Europe so it is hard telling whether the progenitors of the Yankee inherited this art, or stole it, along with the land, from the Indians. Any way, when it came to material they copied from the Indians.

The Indians used ash wood for making baskets, so do white men. In making the trade with the white man, or as the latter prefers to call it, in his diplomatic relations with a superior race whereby the Indian got the "grand bounce," the white man threw this sop at the red man. He could cut an ash tree wherever he found it without saying "by your leave." The writer has seen this done, much to the disgust of the owner of the land upon which the tree grew; but that don't "cut much ice" now, there are so many "good" Indians and so few live ones. Perhaps they got the idea from the whites themselves before July 4, 1776, when the King of England, "gol ding him," could go into anybody's wood lot in America and cut down a pine tree, if he thought it would make a good mast for one of his majesty's ships. But he is just as "good" as an Indian now-a-days.

There was another idea the Indian basket maker possessed that might be held to indicate that he stole basketry from his white brothers, instead of inheriting it from his own people. The latter had a verse which ran like this:

"A dog,
A woman,
And a walnut tree:
The more you beat 'em,
The better they be."

So the Indian "beat" the basket tree and got splints which he could use in his business.

Baskets are useful—intended to be useful—but some way an Indian put art into their make. He smoothed off the splints, graded their widths, extracted juices from tree and plant to color them with; but the Yankee, who stole his trade, did neither. To him they were simply receptacles to hold potatoes or corn or some other thing.

In Colonial days and for some time after, basket making was a prominent business. They made baskets not only to hold things, but to serve as measures—bushel baskets, half bushels and pecks. Beside baskets they bottomed chairs with the splints.

Baskets are used for a greater variety of purposes now and their making is still a business; but has been modernized. They are made by machinery, and the splints out on a veneer machine, still once in a "blue moon," one of the old-fashioned makers can be found.

There is one over in West Lovell, Alvah K. Lord, commonly and lovingly called in that town "the old basket-maker." He has followed the business for nearly half a century. He makes baskets in the old-fashioned way of beaten ash splints, rough—to stand wear and tear. He says one of his baskets will last in daily use for twenty-five years.

It takes Mr. Lord some more than half a day to make a peck basket, but not so long in proportion to make the larger sizes. He first made baskets for farm use but of late a good part of his trade has been for other purposes. There are a good many summer guests around Lake Kezar and they give him many orders. In fact, he can't keep up with his orders. The summer guests of the region like their camps finished and furnished in rustic antique—so splint bottom chairs are again in style over there, and this gives Mr. Lord additional work.

He is somewhat of a pet with the summer guests. Among his friends is reckoned Newton Newkirk, well known to readers of the Boston Post. He was editor of that one-time most noted rural paper, "The Bingville Bugle." He and Mrs. Newkirk spend the summer on the shores of Lake Kezar.

He is something of a naturalist when it comes to the matter of trees—especially ash trees. He thinks there are just two kinds of ash trees in Maine—white ash and the black kind. He says people talk about brown ash and black ash and swamp ash—but he thinks that those are only varieties of brown ash. A swamp ash is only a brown ash in a bad environment—a brown ash that has got into the slums of a forest; and a black ash is only a brown ash that has lived so long and been so much cussedness going on in the woods that its heart has turned black, like so many humans under similar environment.

Then there is the river ash—a kind of cross between white and brown. It is a kind of outcast. People have suspicions about her parentage and always have had. For decades and centuries it has been known as the "bastard" ash. But there are only two kinds says Mr. Lord, with perhaps a cross.

Mr. Lord is interesting—the last of his trade, and may he be the last for many years to come.

The use of powdered skimmilk in the manufacture of sausage is increasing very rapidly according to reports received from the Pure Food Department and by the Bureau of Animal Industry. It has raised a new question as to the definition of sausage as most states are permitting the use of milk under their regulations, while a few states oppose it and the present interpretation of B. A. I. definitions seems to exclude it. Representatives of powdered milk manufacturers are asking the Department of Agriculture to rewrite the definition of sausage so as to permit it. Pennsylvania, after considering the matter, is reported to have decided that the use of powdered milk was not only not an adulterant, but actually increased the value of the sausage.

Land suitable for raising white pine can still be bought in New England for from $3 to $7 per acre. At 40 years of age, white pine on a well-stocked stand would yield on average sites about 25,000 board feet per acre, worth at least $10 per M. ft. What the price will be 40 years from now is uncertain, but we know that since 1900 stumpage values have increased from $5.00 to between $10 and $15 per thousand feet.

Something About Pines.

Arthur G. Staples, the well known editor of the Lewiston Journal, recently went to Alfred with President Clifton D. Gray of Bates College. That institution owns about 12,000 acres of land in that town, left it by the late Benjamin C. Jordan, as a basis of a school of forestry. It is natural pine land, and is largely covered with stands of white pine, with an occasional red or Norway pine, and once in a long while a pitch or jack pine. Ray Randall is the college forester, and what he relates about pines is interesting. This is the way Mr. Staples tells it:

"Now I heard a great deal about pine trees. They seed every seven years or, to put it properly, they have excellent seeding years about once in seven. The seeds are inside the cones. In these intervals they sort of lie fallow and then they grow whole bushels, perfect masses of cones. In these cones are the seeds. They fall and burst and the petals of the cones dry and fall out, and the seeds drop and the pines grow. Once Mr. Jordan planted a lot of the cones to see if they would grow a bit sooner. They would not seed at all. The cones were bound up and the seeds never sprouted at all. They do plant a lot of seed for white pine. It costs about $7.50 a pound nowadays as against $3.00 a pound formerly.

"We went to look at some very tall trees on the lot of an adjacent owner who will not sell or cut. He loves these tall, straight, white pines—one of the noblest of our Maine trees.

"That tree is about 150 to 200 years old,' said Mr. Randall. There were no branches along the trunk until you looked up to where the tufted top swung in the winds. Pine trees have to have shaded trunks so as to grow tall. They grow from the top up and up, new growth every year. Mr. Jordan, who experimented in forestry all of the time before forestry was an educative science, planted a lot of pines, but put the special lot to which we refer, too far apart. They are scrubs. They grew laterally in the sunshine and made no trunk, and the trunk is lumber. Now if those trees had been planted close together they would have grown up to the sunlight, tall and straight and strong, seeking the sun and would have made trees instead of branches. So in the modern nurseries of pines, they are put close together as they grow in the forest. Nature knows what she is about.

"'How do you know that those tall pines are 150 years old?' we asked.

"'Every year a pine tree adds to its height. You can easily see the ridge on the bark where they take on new growth, and you can count the rings of branches as they rise to the top.'

"This was the explanation and if you are pleased to try it, you will see how easily it can be determined by inspection. We practised on smaller trees and counsed a moderately small tree at 28 years. Mr. Randall said that the age was about 30 years as we said. You get a pretty good pine at the age of 50 years if it has a fair chance. Many other things about the pine are interesting. Trees have habits and—almost human streaks; they have their battles and their defeats and successes.

"Down farther along the road, we come to the nursery where Mr. Randall is raising pines for transplanting. He has them at all ages and in the small lot of land there were 22,000 seedling pines. They are protected from the birds and the beating rains by laths laid over boxes. They properly shade them also so that they shall not be burned up by the sun. The forest shade also does this for natural growth. The tiniest of them look like moss, so close together and so small. All sorts of experiments are going on in this land. Mr. Randall is trying planting in furrows, and he is transplanting and he is working all of the time either at forestration or cutting.

Wild Carrot.

Wild carrot is becoming a serious pest in New England. It is often called Queen Anne's Lace, also goes by the name of Devil's Plague. It blossoms from June to August, seeds from August to November, and appears to thrive on all types of soils in meadows, pastures, roadsides and waste places. Usually it lives two years, seeding the second, then dying. It is propagated only from the seed and for this reason can be destroyed if not allowed to go to seed. The control measures advised are cut or pull before it goes to seed, pull up when ground is wet after a rain, cut several inches below ground with spade and apply salt to exposed cut end. Plow the soil every year for three or four seasons, planting crops to be cultivated and get soil in good condition before seeding down. On fields or pastures where plowing cannot be done, progress can be made against the plant by clipping the field when wild carrot first comes into full bloom, usually late in July or early August. Cut off eight to nine inches high and the new crop will come up to be clipped again in September. A few plants may survive, but doing this religiously for two or three seasons will lick it. Stray plants along fences or roadside should be cut or pulled before they go to seed. In pastures sheep are a great help in killing out the plant as they keep nibbling it off. Chemical sprays, such as used to kill some weeds, are of little service in controlling wild carrot. If farmers will follow conscientiously one of the methods outlined, they will finally clean out this pest.

Trains Stopped by Caterpillars.

Trains stopped by caterpillars has a familiar sound to the elder citizens of Oxford County, for fifty years ago, during the army worm invasion, they did that very thing right in our own midst. Now they are doing the act in Alberta, Dominion of Canada, as the following dispatch will show:

"Two steam pipes have been attached to every locomotive on the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway to clear the tracks of caterpillars, which had become so thick that the rails were made slippery and trains often could make no headway. The steam pipes, carried down to the front of the wheels, exert a pressure that blows the insects from the rails. At certain places incessant swarms of caterpillars continue to cross the tracks."

Henry Ford's Ayrshires.

Henry Ford has started a herd of Ayrshires on his 9000-acre farm at Dearborn, Mich. He bought 100 head from the Gossard Breeding Estates. Most of the cows are descendants of the great individuals in the Willowmoor herd, most notable of which are Beuchan Peter Pan, considered the greatest American Ayrshire bull, and Lady of Willowmoor, who has a record of 3382.16 pounds of fat and 84,801 pounds of milk in five years. Her best yearly record is 955 5 pounds of fat and 22,596 of milk. Henry chose Ayrshires for the Ford General Hospital on account of the character of their milk.

Beverages of the Country.

The three great modern beverages of to-day—chocolate, coffee and tea—are farm products. Although not grown in Oxford County, farmers, as well as other people of that piece of territory, use them. Coffee was first used in Abyssinia and from the remotest times. Tea is a Chinese product and was drunk in that country 3000 years B. C. Cortez found the Mexicans drinking cocoa when he invaded their country, and they told him they had been drinking it ever since there was any history of the country.

Locusts are to be used as concentrated cattle and poultry food. A factory to manufacture this product has been established in Johannesburg, South Africa. The raw material is almost inexhaustible in that country, and the output is expected to be large.

The Democrat was a little hasty in saying, a few weeks ago, that the main entrance to the fair grounds would remain in its old location. It is true the new automobile building is entirely below the old entrance, but the entrance has been pulled up bodily and moved down to a point just below the automobile building. This will keep the automobiles, the cattle, and the other vehicle travel farther away from the main exhibition building and the crowd on the grounds near by. The gates in the track fence have also been moved down opposite the new location of the entrance gate. A ticket office will be placed in the lower end of the automobile building beside the gate. The entrances for foot passengers near the exhibition building remain as before.

Lewis E. Marston.

The body of Lewis E. Marston, who died in Los Angeles, Calif., July 25th, arrived in Auburn on Sunday, August 3. A funeral service was held at Plummer & Merrill's funeral parlors, that city, on the following Monday and the remains were brought to South Paris on the afternoon of that day, with a military escort from Alden M. Gayton Post, Auburn, of which the deceased was a member, for burial in Riverside Cemetery.

Mr. Marston was born in South Paris April 24, 1889, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Marston. He made his home in that village until he was 17 years of age, when he went to Auburn to live with an uncle, William H. Marston. In 1908, he enlisted in the regular army and served three years. He was sent to Cuba and his regiment was among the last American troops to be withdrawn from that island. The regiment was then stationed at Fort Sheridan, Ill., and he was discharged from that post. He then returned to Auburn where he remained until the world war broke out when he again enlisted and served during that struggle.

In June, 1913, he married Miss Ethna Connor of Auburn. They lived in Auburn before and after the world war. In December, 1922, they went to Los Angeles, Calif., where they lived until his death. He submitted to a surgical operation the first of July, died on the 25th.

He was a member, not only of the American Legion but of the Order of Red Men.

He is survived, not only by his wife, who accompanied the remains, but by his father, Charles C. Marston of Dania riscotta; four brothers, William P. of Wellesley Oaks, Mass.; Scott N. of Chicago, Ill; Charles A. of Portland, and Arthur D. of Bangor, and one sister, Mrs. Norris Wilson of Damariscotta.

Baron Carl N. Nordfelt.

The body of Baron Carl N. Nordfelt was brought to South Paris Friday for interment in Norway Pine Grove Cemetery, where a funeral service was held.

It is an unusual thing for a European nobleman to be buried in America; or for him to exchange his country across the sea for an American republic, but it was so in this case.

Carl N. Nordfelt was born in Sweden 54 years ago, the eldest son of Baron Carl Nordfelt, and on the former's death succeeded to the title. According to the law of the country he was compelled to serve a term in the Swedish army, and on the completion of his term of service, and when he was 22 years of age, came to this country. He liked so well he adopted it as his own and married an American wife, Miss Alice Carpenter, who was a Norway girl. Skirts Constitute Real Peril to Their Wearers

"Safety first" may mean knickerbockers for women. On the other hand, it may merely mean asbestos skirts. Burns kill more women than men. Skirts are the reason. Don't you believe it? Then listen. Why is it that during the first three years of life more boys die of burns than girls, while with the fourth year the scale turns sharply?

Isn't it because the boys about the time they are three or four drop the garb of femininity and blossom out into their first knee pants? Figures for the United States registration area covering a period of twenty-one years, show that in the fourth year of life the relatively high death rate from burns among girls begins. After that the fatal skirts and frilly waists which girls and women affect play their incendiary role, while the somber, sensible habiliments of masculinity protect their brothers from peril.

Burns, not fires in the sense of conflagrations or house and factory burnings, but just plain burns and scalds, are the only kind of accidents which number the majority of their victims among the weaker sex. Three out of every five deaths from burns are deaths of women and girls. If this happened for a single year it might be considered a mere matter of chance, but the mortality figures show that the ratio has continued constant over a long period.—New York Sun.

Hawaiian Gods Punish Desecrators of Temple

The gods of ancient Hawaii again wreaked their vengeance upon the whites who made merry upon the site of a former heiau, or oldtime temple of worship, according to Hawaiian superstition, when the famous clubhouse of the Order of Elks on the beach at Waikiki was damaged by fire to the extent of $65,000.

The flames, caused by defective wiring, were the last of a series of untoward events, including murder, that occurred at the site of the heiau, which nestles at the foot of Diamond Head, says a Honolulu correspondent of the New York World. According to Hawaiian medicine men only evil will come to those who desecrate the site of an ancient heiau.

The clubhouse was built many years ago by the late James B. Castle, a descendant of the missionaries who came from New England to the islands in 1820, is a residence for his family. During the occupancy of the Castle family two Japanese were murdered in the grounds and attention was called at that time to the tradition of the heiau.

Brewster the Nominee.

Completion of the recount by the governor and council last week definitely settled the fact that the Republican nominee for governor, chosen at the June primary election, is Ralph O. Brewster of Portland, and he is given the certificate of nomination. Frank G. Farrington of Augusta, who had been given a certificate on the face of the returns, was the first to congratulate his opponent, Mr. Brewster, and pledge his support.

The recount, though carried on in the best of spirit on the part of all, has not been a wholly pleasant feature of Maine politics. It has disclosed certain irregularities and laxness in the conduct of our elections which can be corrected by a careful observance of the law. It has disclosed also one glaring fraud, in the case of Ward one, Portland. This fraud was so glaring that it was practically self-evident on the face of the returns. The wonder is that any one should undertake so foolish a performance, and the specially disturbing feature of the affair is that there should be men who were willing to undertake it. It is well to say that no suspicion of having anything to do with any fraudulent act attaches to either candidate.

Notwithstanding some talk which has been made, the incident will create no split in the Republican party. Mr. Brewster, the nominee for governor, is a man of ability and character, and will command the support of those who favored his opponent in the primary election. We shall look for the state to elect him by a large majority, thus not only giving us a Republican state administration, but also having a material effect upon the vote of the nation and aiding the election of President Coolidge in November.

Here and There.

How dear to the heart of the small boy, or girl, for that matter, is the animal cracker—the elephant, the camel and the various other kinds. Grown-ups have not been averse to them, but the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Company, who sell thousands of pounds of crackers in Oxford County, think they are going to do the animals one better in popularity. They are going to get out "the Gumps," Andy, Min, Chester, Uncle Bim and the widow Sender. They are going to put them up in special and fancy boxes, and think they will add gayety to even a Sunday School picnic party. They had to gain permission of Sidney Smith, the cartoonist, to do this, and quite likely pay him a royalty too. This is a source of income probably unthought of by the originator of the Gumps. Old recorders in the days of the Babylonian Kingdom stuck their styli in soft clay when they wanted to preserve a story and baked it; and we have those stories to-day. Perhaps if the Loose-Wiles could get hard enough bake on these crackers, the inhabitants of two thousand years hence could be surprised with the "Gumps," and think there lived at one time a tribe of chinless men. In this way Smith might gain immortality as well as present popularity.

It sounds like a foolish question to ask—can a baby be born without a birthday? It seems such a thing is possible, or at least it is claimed a birth recently took place without any date being fixed. It was on a steamship bound from Yokohama to San Francisco that this particular birth took place. It is a well known fact that in crossing the 180th meridian between Japan and California one day has to be added or got rid of, according to the direction traveled, to make the sunrises or sunsets correspond with the calendar. This child was born on an added day, which happened to be the 30th of February—a date hard to find on any calendar—so what could the poor thing do?

For the first time in history Maine has instituted a state-wide census of crippled or otherwise handicapped children between the ages of 4 and 21 years. This census was taken under the auspices of the commissioner of education, with a view of determining what the state's problem was in assisting those thus handicapped. The whole number of crippled children was found to be 879, divided into the following classes: Those having infantile paralysis, 264; physical deformities, 167; defective vision, 104; defective hearing, 15; deaf and dumb, 87; tuberculosis of the lungs, 42; tuberculosis of the bone, 32; congenital troubles, 37; badly diseased adenoids, 89; injured by accident, 25; and epileptic fits, 26.

E. Haldeman-Julius in "Thoughts" published in his weekly discourses recently on "Sport," which he thinks is a much overworked word. Every man now-a-days claims he takes everything in life as sport—his business, his religion, his politics, and his pleasure. He worships the great god Luck, which takes the seriousness out of life, sport being simply "a great ado about nothing." When a man loses anything, through lack of enterprise or skill, he is urged to be a "good sport," and accept fate; but that doesn't seem to hinder the putting over of something so the home team can win in spite of fate.

People who have the opportunity to watch the long pulp trains which run north over the Rangeley Division of the Maine Central Railroad, and the equally long paper trains which run south over the same road, speculate many times as to where the paper goes to; but the authorities at Washington tell us Americans use 8,000,000 tons and then some each year, which is more than all the other nations combined. We use twice as much per capita as Great Britain. It may come as a surprise that, notwithstanding our great resources, we are obliged to import more than half our supply.

According to statisticians for insurance companies, the average life of man is 38 years. During the civil war the average was 40 years, and in George Washington's day the average was 39. The gain is due to the decreased death rate among children, especially babies. Adults do not live any longer but fewer children die.

Harold Lloyd
IN

BY FAY HING.

I laughed so long and so loud at Harold Lloyd in "Girl Shy" it's a wonder I didn't come out of the theatre with "lock-jaw."

Leave it to Lloyd! That baby can plant three laughs where anybody else would only put one, and in "Girl Shy" he sure has crammed comedy around his horn-rimmed glasses.

In "Girl Shy" Harold is the assistant of a tailor in a small town. He's the sort that stumbles and stutters at the very sight of a skirt and the frills like to drop in and see the poor fellow act foolish.

But in the secret portals of his attic room he is writing a book—a volume to be dedicated to the lovelorn young men of the world—a guide book to girls!!

Acted out on the screen we see the chapters he is writing on how to treat a vampire. Oh, pepper!!!

Finally the book is finished and "the author who knows, and knows and knows" makes a trip to the city to sell it to a publisher. On the train he rescues a wrist bound for a beautiful heiress, and a lurch of the train throws him in the seat beside her.

Here he returns from his trip to dream day dreams over his mending, and puts the empty dog biscuit box in the safe as a romantic reminder of the beauteous creature he fell in love with.

Imagine his joy when fate brings them together again and he finds that she, too, still cherishes the empty crackerjack box in her gold mesh bag!

Her other suitor snatches her away.

Not hearing from the publishers about his book, Harold makes another trip to the city and arrives just as the office force are clustered around the reader and are in hysterics over his serious manuscript. When he announces himself as the author of that sheiklish work they pretend to pay him great homage. He doesn't know they are kidding him until after he hears what the publisher really thinks of it!

He returns heartbroken to the little town and the old drudgery and his hopeless dreams.

He tears up a letter that arrives from the publisher without reading it, and believe me, you will suffer when he does. That is, you will if a dollar means as much to you as it does to me.

Anyhow, things are happening fast and furious.

Our hero learns that the girl of his dreams is to be married to "the kind of a man men forget!" a much marrying fop, whose real wife lives in Harold's little town.

Ah, then starts the most hysterical chase across the screen that ever was!

Over hill and dale, by automobile, motorcycle, wild trolley and mad horses, over the rockiest roads, the highest cliffs, the crowded streets, the parks and private gardens, dashes Harold to rescue the ideal of his dreams.

The bride comes down the stairs, the service has reached the place where the ring is about to be slipped on her slender white finger, and the fatal words pronounced; when—even my typewriter stutters worse than he did with excitement!

I can go no further. Words fail me and laughter shakes me! It's the greatest marry-thon of the movies!

South Paris Merchants Assoc.

E. W. Farnham, Treas.

The Trumbull Players presented the comedy, "In Love with Love," in Association Hall Friday evening. While not so good a play as some of the others they have put on, "In Love with Love" is a good laugh-maker, and furnishes a good vehicle for the display of the lighter emotions—if what is generally called love can be classed among the lighter emotions. There is rather a superfluity of alcohol and near-profanity in the play, some of which could be elided without damaging the bony structure. There was practically a full house, such as the Trumbulls get at every play, and which is fully earned by the quality of their acting. On the 22d they will put on the comedy-drama, "Putting It Over."

Base Ball.

	Won	Lost	P. C.
Athletics	9	5	.643
Dixfield	7	6	.462
Berlin	5	6	.455
Twin Towns	5	7	.417

Four games were scheduled for the week, two of which were to be played at the Oxford County Fair Grounds. The bookings of the Twin Town team were at Lewiston and at Dixfield beside those on the home grounds.

The first engagement took place in Lewiston with the Athletics of that city. The result was a walkover for the latter team with nine scores to its credit and only one to the Twin Towns. It was a hot game notwithstanding the wide difference of score, when first baseman Whalen of the Twin Towns and third baseman Brist of the Athletics supplemented the regular procedure of the game with fisticuffs.

On Wednesday the team went to Dixfield and by bunching hits won from that team by a score of 6 to 5. Score by innings:

Twin Towns	0	0	3	1	0	0	2	0	0	—6
Dixfield	2	0	2	0	0	0	0	0	1	—5

The return game with the Dixies that was to have been played on the Oxford County Fair Grounds Thursday was called off on account of rain.

Saturday's game at the county fair grounds was one to delight the hearts of the fans in this part of the Little Androscoggin valley, as the Twin Towns scored a win over the Athletics, 6 to 2. There was the largest crowd of the season.

South Paris town team played Poland Spring at Poland Wednesday, losing 4 to 3 in a very interesting game.

The Poland team has not been beaten this season, and the Paris boys gave them the best game of the season.

South Paris plays Turner town team at the high school grounds Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 13, at 5 o'clock. Turner has been beaten twice this season by score of 4 to 3, therefore a good game is expected.

Dr. R. N. Hatt.

The many friends of Dr. R. N. Hatt in Oxford County—a young man whom they have seen grow up in the little village of Trap Corner—will be interested to learn he has been selected to take charge of the hospital that is being built by the Mystic Shrine in Springfield, Mass., for the cure and care of crippled children, and that he will sail from Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, where he is now stationed, Sept. 3, for his new position.

Dr. Hatt has met with great success in his work in our island territory. This is a Shriners' hospital, as well as the one he is going to in Springfield, and was founded by Aloha Temple, the Hawaiian branch of the order. He has treated 700 children, and can claim a cure or help for 452 cases. He is greatly loved by these wards of his, who call him Dr. Papale, a word of affection, the meaning of which is lost on a Yankee.

Fourth of July news may seem a little stale, but when it comes from the Hawaiian Islands the delay in delivery can be excused. On that day in Honolulu, a jollification was given the youngsters in the children's hospital—a Fourth of July celebration by the members of Aloha Temple—a luau, the natives called it. The Temple band was in attendance with a vaudeville troupe, and last but by no means least, a feast, at which a two hundred pound pig, cooked in the native way, was served.

About every island in the Hawaiian group is represented in the hospital presided over by Dr. Hatt, and the children he has cured suffered from about every disease of crooked limb and distorted muscles known. The hospital is full and there are now over one hundred children on the waiting list.

Masonry has an interesting history in Hawaii. The first lodge was established in Honolulu in 1841 on the deck of a French ship, the Ajax, by her captain, M. LeTellier, who had authority from the order in France to organize branches in the Pacific Islands. He called it the Lodge Le Progres de L'Oceanie, which is still in existence. Some noted men have been masters of the lodge, including Kings Kamehameha and Kalakaua.

Lothrop-Bartlett.

There was recently solemnized in East Stoneham a marriage which will be of particular interest to Norway people because the bride is a Norway girl. The contracting parties were Gustave Lothrop of Auburn and Miss Irene Louise Bartlett of Norway. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Mr. Thurston and the double ring service was used. The bride was gowned in a white crepe-de-chine with trimmings of Irish lace and hat in harmony.

There was one pleasing thing about the ceremony. It was performed in the same place where the bride's parents were married twenty-three years ago, the family being former residents of Stoneham.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bartlett of Norway. She is a graduate of Hebron Academy and Nasson Institute.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lothrop of Auburn. He is a graduate of Edward Little Institute and the University of Maine. He is a musician and plays in a Lewiston orchestra.

The young couple will keep house in Auburn after the first of September.

Merton L. Kimball.

Merton L. Kimball of Norway died on Thursday evening after several years of failing health.

He was born in Waterford March 18, 1867, the son of the late Hon. Alfred S. and Florence (Houghton) Kimball. He received his education at Bridgton Academy and Bowdoin College. He studied law with his father, was admitted to the Oxford County Bar and practiced for a number of years in Norway. He was income tax collector with headquarters in Portland for some years.

He was a member of Company D, Maine Militia, and served in the Spanish-American war.

He was a 32d degree Mason, Ark Mariner, past chancellor of Pennesseewassee Lodge, Knights of Pythias, past oracle of Oxford Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle, and was for many years secretary of Norway lodge of Odd Fellows.

On November 15, 1892, he married Miss Eva M. Cook of Ellsworth, who survives him, with one son Houghton Kimball, a student at Phillips-Exeter Academy.

Mrs. Don C. Seitz.

The people of Norway were shocked Tuesday morning to learn that Mrs. Mildred E. Seitz, wife of Don C. Seitz, business manager of the New York World, and claimed by the town as one of its most noted sons, had died during the previous night at St. Barnabas Hospital in Portland, where she had gone for an operation from the Summit Spring Hotel in Harrison, where she was passing the summer.

Mrs. Seitz was the daughter of the late John H. Blake of Deering, and was born in that city in 1891. She married Mr. Seitz in 1890, and they went to Brooklyn, N. Y., where they have since lived. She was very active in many things. She has served as president of the Chiropean and Cambridge Clubs, and as regent of the Long Island Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. She was deeply interested in orphans and has found homes for about one hundred, the majority of whom came from Maine.

Besides her husband she is survived by two daughters, Miss Mildred Seitz and Mrs. E. M. Gelbel of Tientsin, China.

Universalist Grove Meeting.

Annual grove meeting at Dearborn Grove, Bryant's Pond, Sunday, Aug. 17. Rev. Alfred S. Cole of West Somerville, Mass., is the morning speaker, and Stanley Manning, superintendent of Universalist churches in Maine, will be the afternoon speaker. Everyone is cordially invited.

We are a pretty sick nation. Last year for the twelve months ending June 30, doctors' prescriptions for whiskey amounted to eleven million half-pint bottles, or a half-pint for every ten Americans. Incidentally it added twenty millions of dollars to the medical profession's income.

Spanish Prisoner Swindle Again.

It is somewhat remarkable that anything so old and hoary as the Spanish prisoner swindle should still be an existing institution, endeavoring with or without success to separate good Americans from their money. It would seem reasonable to suppose that the perpetrators of the swindle were all really in prison by this time, and that the knowledge of the swindle was so general that no one could be ignorant of it and so become a victim.

That these suppositions are not justified is shown by the fact that within a few days a South Paris man has been an attempted mark in the game. That the swindle seeks its victims somewhat promiscuously, and not by careful selection, is shown by the fact that the letter was addressed to the South Paris citizen as proprietor of a business with which he has had no connection for some years, showing that the name and address were probably obtained from some old directory.

One of these baiting letters, which the writer saw, addressed to another Paris man some years ago, gave a somewhat long and detailed story explaining the circumstances which had left the originator of the epistle languishing in prison. The 1924 model is much briefer, but it certainly makes an offer which would appeal to the cupidity of an ignorant man.

The letter is as follows, except the address given for cable communication at the bottom. It bears a Spanish stamp and an undecipherable postmark:

Barcelona 23-7-1924

Dear Sir:

Being imprisoned here by bankruptcy I beseech you to help me to obtain a sum of $360,000 Dollars I have in America being necessary to come here to raise the seizure of my luggage paying to the Register of the Court the expenses of my trial and recover my portmanteau containing a secret pocket where I have hidden two checks payable to bearer for that sum.

As reward, I will give up to you the third part vis 120,000 Dollars.

Special Days at Camp Meeting.

The full program of the Methodist camp meeting at Empire Grove is made up and will be published in a few days. There are exercises of value every day, but, because of the subjects to be considered, and the character of the speakers, some days may be of special interest.

At 11 A. M. each day, under the general caption, Conservation of Childhood and Youth, will be addresses of great value on Health, Moral Training, Care of the Destitute, Protection from Crime. These addresses should have a wide bearing.

The two Sundays, Aug. 17th and 24th, will be special days. On the first named, Bishop E. G. Richardson of Atlanta, Ga., will speak in the afternoon. Bishop Richardson has been in Maine, but is not so well known as some others of the Episcopal Board. He is a strong man and an able speaker. On the 24th, in the afternoon, Bishop F. M. Bristol will speak. It is only necessary to mention his name, for all who may have heard him will desire to hear him again.

Tuesday, Aug. 19th, will be field day for the Woman's Home and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies. In the afternoon, Miss Gladys Marsden of Portland will speak for the Home, and Mrs. L. W. Moore of Old Orchard for the Foreign work. Both ladies are good speakers. Mrs. Moore spent thirty years in India and knows the field.

Wednesday, Aug. 20th, is World Service Day, and Rev. Robert S. Spencer of India will give the address of the afternoon. Mr. Spencer has been in India some time and is fully competent to speak of that and of wonders and great achievements.

Thursday is to be Citizenship Day. The discussion at 11 A. M. of Safeguards of Society, by Rev. C. S. Cummings, Mayor of Auburn, is sure to be of value. In these days of crime and crookedness this subject is vital, and Mayor Cummings is abundantly able to handle it. In the afternoon the subject of Citizenship is slated, and there is prospect that a member of Congress may be a speaker.

Maine News Notes.

A sewing machine made entirely of wood, except a few screws and the needle, is owned by P. A. Coney of Deering Center. Although the wooden bobbins, wooden wheel, wooden head and wooden machinery are more than half a century old, all are in good working condition. The machine was made 63 years ago by Mr. Coney's grandfather, Philip A. Faust of Danville, Pa. This is believed to be the only wooden sewing machine ever made.

At Kittery Point, where the white pine blister rust has been present since about 1898, the currants and gooseberries which were the direct cause of the spread of the rust to the pine were removed in 1917. A study of this area made lately shows how successful these early protective measures were, says a federal report recently made. "Young white pines which have sprung up on this diseased area between 1917 and 1921, where all of these nurse plants were removed, have without exception been free from the blister rust. At the end of 1921, 242 young seedlings were counted per acre. This should be sufficient proof of the effectiveness of the control methods which have been worked out by the United States Department of Agriculture."

According to the latest rumor regarding a new hotel for Lewiston, actual building operations will begin the coming fall. While nothing definite has been done, the local committee, it is said, has practically decided upon a site and then it is expected there will be little delay in breaking ground and starting work on the foundation. The building will be built by the Maine Hotels Inc., the company recently organized by Edward J. Post of Portland. In addition to the Lewiston hotel project, the company plans to start on a new $200,000 building at Skowhegan the latter part of this month. Both at Lewiston and Skowhegan local organizations will be formed for the building of the hotels, while the Maine Hotels Inc. will be the holding and operating company.

University of Maine is expending this summer between $30,000 and $35,000 for repairs on buildings and equipment, according to Frederick Youngs, the treasurer. Nearly all of the college buildings and six dwelling houses on University property are undergoing repairs or being freshened up with paint. A new cement walk has been laid between the library and Balentine Hall, and cement steps installed to replace the wooden ones. In Hannibal Hamlin Hall, workmen are busy on repairs to the woodwork and Winslow and Balentine Halls are being thoroughly renovated. In Wingate, Coburn and Holmes Halls superficial repairs are being made and there is yet considerable work to do in Estabrooke and Lord Halls. Woodwork on all of the brick buildings will receive new coats of paint.

No matter where you live, you can now have running water under pressure in your home.

Modern plumbing, including bathroom with hot and cold water, lavatory, shower, toilet and faucets in many convenient places—think what this means to the suburban or farm home.

With the present standards of living these conveniences are a necessity. They make for comfort, health, sanitation and labor-saving. They were formerly to be had only in the city, but now,

DURO Water Systems

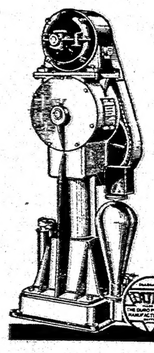
will give you all the advantages of city water service. Duro Systems are built in many sizes and styles. They meet the needs of a bungalow or a country club. They are driven either by electric motor or gasoline engine.



A duro system is worth all it costs for fire protection alone. It is easily installed in old or new homes—taking water from deep or shallow well, cistern or spring.

Ask us to point out the many reasons why Duro costs less but is worth more than any other water system you can buy.

A Kitchen Sonnet.

O, little room, wherein my days go by!
Each like to each, yet each one set apart
For special duties—nearest to my heart
Art thou of all the house—in thee I try
New issues, when the old ones go awry,
And with new victories allay the smart
Of dismal failures, and afresh I start
With courage new, to conquer or to die.

O, simple floor, uncarpeted below!
The inward eye has visions for its balm,
And duty done is solace for all woe.
And every modest tool that hangs in view
Is fitted for the work it has to do.

Making an Old Kitchen New.

(By Doris W. McCray.)

The other day a group of women met to talk about making over kitchens. After partaking of an unusually good picnic dinner and the usual exchange of recipes, we began the regular meeting. The group of thirteen women represented nine different school districts. The meeting took place in Iowa, but the same thing is happening all over the country, where neighbors get together to talk over their problems with the help of a government specialist sent out by their state college.

Our specialist first asked the women which they wanted most, light or water in the kitchen. She told of one woman who had a sink and running water put into her kitchen for $6, another for $8, each confessing that she could have afforded it long ago had she known how small the expense would be. Several women present who had had electricity installed, pointed out its advantages, and said they used the power not only for light, but for running various machines. The relative cost of acetylene, electric light from a farm plant, and light from the high power line were discussed.

HOW MUCH WINDOW SPACE?

Brackets over the sink and work-table to hold lamps where they would give best light for evening work were then recommended. One specialist said the glass area in a kitchen should be 20 per cent of the floor area; for instance, a room measuring ten by twelve feet would have 120 square feet in the floor, and therefore the windows should total twenty-four square feet of glass. She mentioned white walls as making the room seem lighter and larger; but light gray or tan walls are preferable because softer in tone and easier to keep clean in a room where canning, separating and some of the heavy tasks incident to butchering are done. Our hostess stated that she likes her white kitchen and finds it little trouble to keep clean, but she has no small children, and her summer kitchen (in the basement) accommodates separator, washer and meals for harvesters.

THE BEST FLOORING.

Samples of flooring, including oiled hard maple, varnished hard pine, inlaid and printed linoleum were then shown. The oiled floor is good when a little oil is used and it is rubbed well into the grain of the wood, using much pressure. Women who had different floors told of their advantages and disadvantages. Linoleum was in favor as the easiest to clean and the prettiest to look at. The method of preserving it is to give it three coats of good grade floor varnish every other year. She had seen a linoleum fourteen years in use which had been given this care and it was in fine condition. After the figures have worn off the printed linoleum, two coats of paint and one of varnish were advised. A worn Ingrain carpet treated with a filler, paint, and varnish makes a good substitute for linoleum.

Mop-wringers then came up for discussion and it was remarked that one never sees a janitor wringing a mop by hand.

KITCHEN ARRANGEMENT DISCUSSED.

There was more truth than poetry in the humorous cartoon showing the woman in an old-fashioned kitchen, walking several rods during the making of an apple pie. At our meeting a kitchen plan was shown and the lines of travel traced which the owner would walk during the preparation of meals. The plan was then re-arranged by means of a few changes which would save many hours of work and miles of travel during the year. We then adjourned to our hostess' kitchen and watched her make a pot of coffee, walking just eight steps, while our specialist told how in the old kitchen of her girlhood home, she had walked eighty steps in performing the same task, while a little thought in arrangement of materials would have saved time and steps. The advantages of tea carts, wheel trays, and tables on castors were discussed. Our hostess explained the advantages of her kitchen which she planned just as she wanted it when they built the house a few years ago. It is a most convenient kitchen for a country home.

We then filled out questionnaires which set us thinking about our own kitchens. The questions concerned water supply, light, ventilation, floor and wall finishes, kind of fuel, storage space, equipment and floor plan. Questions about equipment were worded something like this: "Do you have a refrigerator, high stool, comfortable chair, dish-drainer, gasoline iron, carpet-sweeper, vacuum-cleaner, wheel tray, power washer, electric iron, mop-wringer, fireless cooker, pressure cooker, dumb-waiter?"

Iceless refrigerators, those which lower into a hole beneath the cellar floor, were favored since they would also serve as dumb-waiters for carrying fruit jars up and down cellar. The price of these refrigerators ranges from $35 to $45, and in some cases they have been copied by the home carpenter. A hole two feet deep in the cellar floor was suggested as a cool place in which to keep milk. A window box is handy for the less cold part of winter, the box being attached to the sill so that when the window is raised the food can be put into it to keep cool.

Other kitchen problems were talked over, and I am sure every one of us went home and improved our own kitchens, if only to move the salt box and the coffee canister nearer the stove.

Little Pies.

It sounds like a lot more trouble to make six little pies than it does to make one large one that can be cut into six pieces. It really isn't and they are so much more interesting. Then you are sure that they can't run as so many of the big pies begin to do the minute they are cut. These have their own little walls around them.

I proceed just exactly as for any pie and when I roll out the crust I cut it into small rounds that will just fit well around an inverted muffin pan. Of course these shells have to be baked first. I put them into a hot oven for 15 minutes and then fill in lemon, butterscotch, apple, or anything else I like, provided it has been cooked, and then to make it extra fine I cover them with a meringue and bake again very slowly for about 15 minutes.

I save a lot of time by mixing my pie crust in large amounts, putting in everything but the water. It keeps indefinitely in a cool place and the job of pie-making is nothing if you don't have to get your hands into the lard every time.
—Lucy Thompson.

With a Cup of Tea.

Delicious little wafers to serve with a cup of tea or a glass of lemonade can be made at a moment's notice if one has on hand a box of saltines and a quantity of cream chocolates or other soft-filled candy.

With a broad fork, mash a chocolate and spread it on a saltine. If there is no hot oven available, place another saltine over the candy, sandwich-wise, and they will prove very satisfactory.

It is a great improvement, however, to set the wafer and chocolate in a hot oven until the candy begins to soften, then place the top wafer and return to the oven until it is crisp.

These little confections will save the day many a time when one must unexpectedly serve some light refreshment and the cake-box is empty, as a cake-box has an exasperating way of being on many such occasions.—Alice M. Ashton.

Band Concert at 8 P. M.

Norway Merchants' Association.

HERE COMES THE BAND!

To Give Two Chautauqua Programs—Afternoon and Evening

Green makes a band to vie with a symphony orchestra. He lifts wind instruments out of noise-making devices to the creation of as delicate effects as any stringed orchestra might create. That is what made Sousa famous. That is why Edwin Frank Goldman is now doing so well in New York City. Yet there are always the martial strains, the marktime march music which gets your feet wiggling about and you ready to get up and yell!

Conductor Green has made his programs to fit in with Greater Chautauqua plans. In the afternoon he has a "Pop" concert, for a Family Party event (this we will explain presently). At night he has a program that is of exceptional merit. The tuneful Raymond Overture of Ambroise Thomas will set things going, there will be a medley of beautiful sacred music, a melodic serenade of Tite, and, of course, there will be rousing music of the type of Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Mr. Green has a fine sense of program making. He knows what people like. Also he knows what they ought to like. Also he knows how to mix just enough of both to make his programs entertaining and uplifting.

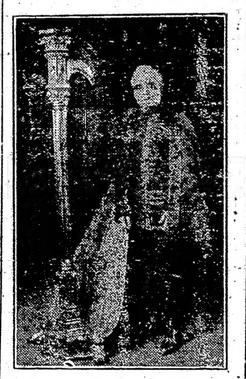
At the time that President Harding was notified of his nomination, Mr. Green was delegated to reorganize and conduct the band in which Mr. Harding played as a young man and which was known as "Harding's Own Band." Among many bands this one, under Mr. Green's direction, was the outstanding feature of the festivities in connection with the notification.

The program, while including well-known band selections, such as "Raymond Overture," Victor Herbert's "Fortune Tellers," and "Carmen," that the public has come to know and like, is not made up of time-worn numbers. Descriptive numbers such as "The Hunting of the Snark"; humorous "The Bull in the China Shop"; characteristic, "Forest Whispers"; novelty, "The Show-Offs", "Three O'clock in the Morning and Later", old songs, "Sweet and Low", "Love's Old Sweet Song", and such stirring numbers as "The Royal Australian Navy", "The American Legion March", are features of the program. Cornet solos and duets and baritone solos are interpolated among the great ensemble numbers of the band.

Among the members of this organization are men who have played solo positions with the leading bands of America. You will not want to miss the baritone solo by Noble Howard, who for the past two seasons has played solo baritone with Arthur Pryor's Band, who is the director of the Murat Temple Shrine Band of Indianapolis. The cornet duet of Messrs. Henry and Williams is another number that will delight you.

Harp and Xylophone Solos by Pasquale Montani

Pasquale Montani, who is featured as the harp soloist with Green and his Band, is of American birth, but of Italian parentage. He is of a family of seven brothers, all of whom are musicians. He is a most accomplished harpist who, while playing classical numbers with a marvelous technique and understanding, makes them as enjoyable as the well-known and more simple ballad numbers which he also uses.



Mr. Montani will fill a regular place in the band as flutist and will double on piccolo and saxophone. He will also play during the band program one or two xylophone solos.

Not only does Green and his Band make a feast for the ear. But they, pictorially, are perfect. The uniforms are striking. The instruments are beautiful to look upon. The harp and xylophone are themselves majestic instruments. The stage is set in royal purple hangings.

On both the afternoon and evening programs there will be presented numbers specially arranged for Green and his Band by Herman Bellstedt, who, for many years, had made the principal arrangements for Sousa's Band. The popular air, "Three O'clock in the Moring," has been worked into a special humorous selection for the band.

In the evening, the second part of the concert will be opened by another Bellstedt arrangement, "The Show Offs"—a number with plenty of action and in which the work of each member of the organization is at some time during the selection brought prominently to the attention of the audience. Other numbers have been specially arranged for the band by Mr. Green himself.

A Family Party at a Concert

The afternoon concert is a "pop" affair. That is, it is what the big city concert-makers announce for the greater crowds than those who just go to the classical offerings.

But this pop concert is a Family Party. Mother and daughter, father and son, are urged to attend, and discuss certain things. This program will relate back to Isaacson's afternoon and evening. Here will be a chance to try out some of the things he tells about. What does music mean? What does it do to you? For instance, what are the ideas which come to father and son in the beautiful "Largo" of the New World Symphony. Seemingly this name means nothing. But with Isaacson's ideas and Green's music, and the discussion which father and son will have, this will begin to assume larger proportions than the whole tent.

Community "Sing"

There's nothing like singing to get out all the grouch, sulkiness, anger, tiredness. Singing is the greatest tonic in the world. You don't need to be a singer. Oh no, no matter how bad you are at singing, the whole ensemble sounds fine. It isn't a question of singing at all. But fun—and if there isn't democracy, there isn't any anywhere!
